BITTER WORDS.

BY ROSA F. ARLE.

Bitter word! How deep they rankle,
Striking like a deadly dart,
When the lips we have hurled them
Through the armor of the heart.
Fraught with folly, soon repented
Tho' they may be, yet they lie
Mid the heart's bright, blooming roses,
Like a snake that will not die.

Oh, their sting we strive to banish,
But alas! it is in vain—
Bitter words when once they're spoken
Never after lose their pain;
Never after lose their anguish;
Never after lose their power,
Just a touch, however they're hidden,
Brings again the old-time power.

Many a heart has lost its treasures,
Many a soul its Heaven above,
For the words of bitter meaning,
Coming from the lips we love—
Bitter words! Oh, bitter, bitter—
Keep them close within the breast,
They may mar a whole life's music
And destroy a whole life's rest.

Salvation Oil is the best and greatest external remedy yet discovered. It cures rheumatism or neuralgia in one or two days. Price 25 cents.

ANNIVERSARY DAY.

Yesterday, March 7, was the anniversary of the two most gigantic strikes that ever were inaugurated. March 7, 1885, and March 7, 1886—the shop men of the Pacific railroad, extending through four states, ceased to labor at the blowing of the shop whistle. Subsequently they stopped all traffic but the running of passenger trains, and gave untold trouble to every one who would not endorse their revolutionary methods. Many of the leaders of the movement are now wanderers upon the earth, hated and despised wherever their records are known.

It is very probable that Sedalia will never again be disgraced by such scenes as were enacted during those two conflicts.

That is possibly why the labor element in the legislature is opposing the appropriation for the state militia.

THE RAILROADS.

—Edwin Adams, traveling solicitor for the Gilmore Route, was in Sedalia yesterday.

—The Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen have been compelled to abandon their annual ball which they expected to give on the 17th inst. (St. Patrick's Day) at Mozart Hall, on account of being unable to secure the hall. C. H. Harris seriously contemplates resigning his position as postal clerk between Hannibal and Sedalia on the M., K. & T. He is now taking a lay-off of twenty days. He will engage in other business and will remain in Hannibal. Mr. Harris has proven a faithful and competent postal clerk, having lost no time until he took the present lay-off.—Hannibal Post.

TROUBLE OVER MILEAGE TICKETS.

The mileage ticket question is now causing the passenger traffic officials of the western roads to lose considerable sleep. In addition to the threat of the Alton road to put a 2 cent per mile rate on 1,000 mile tickets over its entire system between Chicago and Kansas City it was reported yesterday that the Missouri Pacific was applying its 1½ cent rate on 1,000 mile tickets to all points in Colorado and Utah. According to the agreement on mileage tickets at 2 cents per mile rate on 2,000 mile tickets with a rebate shall apply to all points east of the Missouri river and a 2½ cent rate shall apply on all 1,000 mile tickets east of the eastern Colorado state line. West of this line the agreed rate is 3 cents per mile. The Missouri Pacific bases its right to apply these tickets over its entire system on a technical point in the association rates. The agreement in prescribing the rule which governs the sale of these tickets specifies where they shall be sold and does not say anything about where they shall be honored. The Missouri Pacific claims that it can honor a 2½ cent ticket wheresoever it chooses so long as it is sold in the territory prescribed by the agreement.

It is expected that all other lines will, in self defense, adopt the same interpretation of the agreement until some ruling is made by the association.

DIED AT THE HOSPITAL.

C. H. McHenry, a section laborer from Denison, Texas, died at the M. K. & T., hospital last night. He was admitted on Feb. 14, at which time he was suffering from an attack of pneumonia. Deceased was 33 years old and a good looking man. His body was at once removed to Hillis' undertaking rooms.

A FIGHT TO A FINISH.

George Dixon and G. W. Rogers, both well-known Sedalians, had a lively scrapping match on the corner of Main and Osage streets yesterday afternoon. They were promptly arrested and gave bond for their appearance in the police court to-morrow morning.

TURLINGTON TOPICS.

Minor Scenes and Incidents Connected With The Execution at Boonville.

—All of the late Sheriff Cranmer's family remained in the city during the execution, but gave no expression, so far as known, concerning the affair.

—The negro sexton, who dug Turlington's grave, said he had never done that kind of work for a live man before; and Undertaker W. L. Spahr said that he had never prepared a coffin before for a man not yet dead.

—The BAZOO representative, in passing to and from the jail shortly before the hanging, noticed a lady standing at a window across the way, looking out and crying. The curtain was partly drawn and she was deeply affected at the tragical scenes so near her home.

—Two men rode sixty miles on horseback from north of the Missouri river to see the hanging of Turlington. They had understood that the execution would be public, and were greatly disappointed upon their arrival in town to find that they would not be admitted inside the jail.

—Photographs of John Oscar Turlington were peddled about the streets by boys on the day of the execution. They were taken by O. D. Edwards, of that city, and he realized a neat sum from the sale. They represented Turlington as he looked before he had turned out a full growth of beard.

—The coffin in which the dead man was buried, was placed by Undertaker W. L. Spahr on the back porch of the jail residence and covered with black oil cloth. It was near the doorway where Turlington walked out to the scaffold, but he failed to catch a glimpse of the gloomy box that would so soon hold his mortal remains.

—Turlington's hands were not tied behind him on the scaffold, with a rope, as is the usual custom, but they were crossed and bound in front of him by a leather strap, neatly but securely arranged, and made by a Boonville harness-maker. It looked and worked better than the old way of pinioning.

—William Lee, a jolly Irishman, erected the scaffold on which Turlington was hanged. This was his third job of the kind. Among his other scaffolds was the one on which three Italians were executed in St. Louis some years ago. Mr. Lee does not seek this kind of work-it has only been his fate to perform it.

—The dead man had hardly been placed in his coffin before a rumor became current that Dr. Dresel, of Sedalia, had purchased the body and would have it shipped to this city for dissection. There was no foundation for the report further than the presence of Dr. Dresel at the execution and the flippant imagination of some unsanctified liar.

—J. M. Green, proprietor of the Mahan hotel, who was one of the guards, while viewing the prisoner on the scaffold, called special attention to Turlington's terribly knitted and corded brow—a peculiarity not noted in him theretofore. As Mr. Green remarked, it was an indication of the almost superhuman strain Turlington was enduring.

—Shortly before the last scene, Sheriff Ellis R. Smith, of Sedalia, sent a message upstairs to Turlington that, if he wished to make any confession concerning certain points about which he and Smith had previously talked, that he would call on him once more. Turlington sent back word that he did not desire to say anything further in reference to the matters alluded to. "It will do me no good and it may harm some other persons, and I shall not say anything," said the doomed man. Sheriff Smith did not desire to press the matter, though he is confident that Turlington died, carrying with him many an important secret.

—An old gentleman named Pogue, who resides in the eastern part of Cooper county and who, for many years has caused much amusement when in his cups, by declaring that he is "Garibaldi, by G—d!" applied at the jail door to see Turlington. Guard Nicholson told him that as he had no ticket, he could not pass him in. "But, I am a newspaper man," said the old fellow still this talismanic proposition did not meet with success as he had no credentials. "I am writing a history of the Black Hawk war," persisted the old gentleman. Still this failed to move the stony heart of the strong guard. "Garibaldi!" then pulled out his purse and offered to pay his way, but this scheme was equally unsuccessful and he failed to witness the execution.

—Pierre Ridgely, the bright and active young city editor of the Boonville Democrat, suspecting that no person but the guard would be allowed to see Turlington the night preceding the execution, arranged with B. B. Goodman, the death-watch, to note the prisoner's language and conduct from hour to hour, jot it all down on paper furnished him and throw it out the front window at a given signal. About one o'clock at night Ridgely and a friend went up to the jail through the snow; the former climbed over the fence, whistled, and in a moment, from the dimly lighted window near the death cell, several sheets of paper fluttered down and were gathered up. The faithful guard had kept his promise and Ridgely had scored a very neat little scoop, the benefit of which he generously divided with the BAZOO representative.

The drummers all say that their business is picking up. It is generally understood that drummers are great at picking up, but we are sure they can't pick up a cold which they could not cure with Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

A TIMELY DEFENSE.

The following extract is taken from the sermon of the Rev. Dr. J. B. Hawthorne of Atlanta, Ga:

"A man may indulge the passion for money until it gets the complete mastery of him and renders him insensible to the influence of moral truth. Jay Gould is said to be worth $150,000,000. Surely that is a competency? Why doesn't he stop and devote his energies to something nobler? Because he has not the moral power to do it. The earth born passions rage within him like a furnace heat, and he has no more control over it than he has over the cyclone, the volcano or the earthquake. He has less conscience to-day about making a money panic, wrecking great industries, multiplying hardships and woes of the poor and bribing a congressman than he ever had. Jay Gould is a veritable slave. Some men are enslaved by drink, some by licentiousness and some by gluttony, but he is the rich slave of Mammon. He has sold himself into everlasting bondage for money. When the plain old christian commonwealth of Georgia was recently asked to bow down to it and pay reverence to this guilty slave, answering through her noble chief executive, she said 'nay, nay,' and from the mountain to the sea all people responded 'amen and amen.'"

An old reader of the BAZOO having read the above thus comments on it. "The gentleman from Georgia proceeds to show up, the life and actions of Jay Gould, an American citizen, whose only crime appears to be that of having gotten wealthy by his own exertions, and who, still is going on making more money. The papers have given us for the past twenty-five years, the daily report of Mr. Gould and his family, and in all that time no word of evil repute or reproach has been said, against him or they."

His family I believe, are members of the Presbyterian church in New York City, and try and live at peace and harmony with the world. But the father of this Christian family has money and is making more money, and here lies the offense.

Our reverend gentleman, says 'he has sold himself into everlasting bondage for money.' Simply this and nothing more, for if Mr. Gould thinks a certain property will pay him to purchase it, he buys it and pays for it. He runs the chances of its being a success and generally makes it a success.

A few years ago, the city of Memphis was scourged with yellow fever. People and cities gave liberally, and among those you will find the name of Jay Gould for $5,000. Memphis is not so far from Atlanta that a gift of this kind could be forgotten and lost sight of in a few years, and the reverend gentleman could have boasted of ONE good act performed by this 'pretentious Pharisee,' not far from Atlanta.

In regard to making money panics, wrecking great industries, multiplying hardships and woes of the poor, these are mere chimeras of the reverend gentleman's brain—for every business man knows that in scenes and times of this sort, you cannot make money.

And now for the reverend gentleman, so far as his lecture or sermon goes, I have been able to see nothing but denunciations of a quiet American citizen—and not a single word in his favor. He says he is a minister of Christ, and THAT Christ has said: 'He that seeth his brother have need, and shutteth up his bowels of compassion against him, how dwelleth the love of God in that man.' If he had only said a word in poor Mr. Gould's favor, how much more Christ-like it would have seemed." J. M. PILKINGTON.

'Tis strange that ladies will go on month after month suffering with some female disorder, which one bottle of Dr. Dromgoole's English Female Bitters would speedily correct.
